

NAME
Sir Belvedere Foxborough

CONCEPT
"Careful now, I think I see—"
Faints
Secretary of the Royal Canaries Hunting Society. A dashing but lovable fop.
Member of a proto-socialist movement to overthrow all forms of hierarchical governments and monarchies.

DRIVE
To create a legacy outside of your prestigious family name. And, you know, overthrow governments.

WEAKNESS
You have a tendency to faint at the first sign of danger.

POWERS

GRACE. Your training has made moving and behaving with perfect grace and poise second nature, and your clothing will never hinder you. This often leaves a favorable impression on the people you meet, and it also means your movement never provokes attacks of opportunity, including from long weapons.

RALLYING SPEECH. By appealing to the virtue of your mission, your companions' heroic defiance of all odds, or the myriad wonders experienced, you lift everyone's morale. Once per session, your party gains 4 Wonder points, and all allies who heard the speech, including yourself, heal 3d4 damage. This takes at least 2 actions.

ANIMAL EMPATHY. Opposed Mind check to calm animals and beasts. Very basic communication with them too.

BULWARK I. You had access to martial training beyond the reach of most people, and learned how to make the most of protective gear. Light armor absorbs 2 points of damage for you, instead of 1.

CUNNING IDEA. You shout a quick piece of strategic advice to an ally. Forego one of your actions, and give an immediate action to an ally who can see, hear, and understand you.
